The 7 Must-See Films of This Year's Beefeater In-Edit

By Pablo Carpal | October 23, 2014

5. We Don't Wanna Make You Dance

Like the essential documentaries Searching for Sugar Man and A Band Called Death, We Don't Wanna Make You Dance is the title of a promising new exercise in musical archeology, in which its director, Lucy Kostelanetz, reveals the story and music of Miller, Miller, Miller & Sloan: a quartet of white boys from the eighties who played a brilliant mix of funk, rap and pop. In addition to featuring charismatic characters that will make you laugh and shake your groove thing, We Don't Wanna Make You Dance reflects on the meaning of success and our expectations of it.
